SOCIAL WORK TRAINING MODULES

The National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism has presented these training modules for formal Social Work Education. The training modules provide a level of information and skill identified as appropriate for social workers.

Given the family systems orientation, these modules give insight into the role of the family in alcoholism. There is a wealth of information in these modules including nine modules on alcoholism as an entity, and 12 modules on "Special Populations." Training in "Alcohol and Families" is contained in Module 10J.

Learning Objectives:

- Recognize a family systems perspective of alcohol use disorders.
- Be familiar with family factors that increase or reduce risk of developing an alcohol use disorder.
- Be familiar with family problems that may result from or co-occur with an alcohol use disorder.
- Understand recent research concerning the relationship between family factors and recovery.

Each module comes with a text handout, a presentation slide and a PowerPoint presentation. Although these modules were not written for the layperson, there is a monumental amount of information available in these training modules that are likely to be of use to other members of the primary care community.
